

“In Trok Tao lane there are rows of shop houses on both sides, every house hang green lantern inside their doors, every evening before dark I saw women holding bunch of lighted ...sticks (about 20) under the green lantern. I asked them ‘why they do that?’, they said to prey for more customers. These women priced between 6 salung (Baht 1.50) or 2 Baht. But in the high rise building opposite the lane, there are women doing the same work as these women here, but hidden their green lantern inside that we cannot see from outside, so it is only serve people who are regularly known the place as “Yisun Lueng – Yellow Yisun” more high market and not so aggressive as in Trok Tao lane, priced around 3-4 Baht. I’ve been there many times, they are more polite and inside the rooms are well decorated for higher customers, not mixed up like in Trok Tao lane.” (Trok Tao today is Yaowarat Soi 15, which connected to Sumpeng or Thanon Vanich) as told by Kanchanakapan.